Pebbles on the shore

I have just spent a very interesting two hours at church with my Curate, Valerie, helping her to prepare to celebrate her first Eucharist at Holy Trinity following her ordination to the Priesthood on 3 June.

I remember doing a similar thing with my training incumbent when I was about to be priested just over 13 years ago, and how overwhelming it felt to be on the brink of entering into priestly ministry. For me, there was an added urgency in that my first Eucharist (at the Cathedral in Aberdeen) was set to be televised and broadcast across Scotland – so as well as getting myself familiar with the various different postures and hand and arm actions I also had to get the timing of the various bits of the service right so that the service as a whole would last exactly 43 minutes and 17 seconds (or whatever unlikely combination of minutes and seconds it was supposed to last – I forget the exact number now!)

Since then, I have probably celebrated the Eucharist around 3000 times.

What struck me this morning, though, as I went through the Eucharistic Prayer with Valerie bit by bit, was that it had all become extremely routine – and it came as quite a shock when Valerie began to question me about why I did things the way that I did and, at times, concluded that she would like to do them differently!

For the first time in ages I was forced to think about what I had done without thinking for ages; and the result was that what had become such a routine, ordinary thing, took on new meaning for me and left me thinking again about how best to do it.

And isn't it funny how even the most important of things can end up becoming routine and ordinary. Our friends, our relationships, time with loved ones, even our spiritual lives. It's so easy for things to lose their freshness, for us to take them for granted. And when that happens, they die a little, though we might not realise it at the time.

So, sometimes, maybe, it's a good idea to pause, to think again about who and what's important to us; to take stock, to reflect and to question. And, by doing so, perhaps, to breathe new life and hope into the ordinary and familiar and to give our lives a fresher and more exciting edge.

COLLECTION FOR THE MISSION TO SEAFARERS

The Mission to Seafarers

Caring for seafarers around the world

It has become customary in the last few years that the retiring collection on the last Sunday in June has been in aid of the Mission to Seafarers.

We in this island rely on seafarers to bring us our oil and other good in the tankers and container ships that come into our ports, and many seafarers are employed on cruise ships and ferries using.

Nowadays most of these people are from the Philippines and other third world countries. They are far from home for long periods of time, on low wages, and on less than satisfactory conditions of employment since most of the ships sail under flags of convenience.

The Mission to Seafarers meets both their spiritual and welfare needs in many ports world wide. Here in Scotland the Mission provides a chaplain, the Rev. Tim Tunley, based on Grangemouth, but whose parish covers all the Scottish Ports.

That he can be kept in post and continue his work depends entirely on charitable donations so remember him and his work in your prayers as well as in your giving on 25 June.

May 2011

At the end of April the income was £36,545 and the expenditure £45,650.

The Rector's Fund is for the needy of the parish. The current total to hand is £496.

The collection for the Bishop's Lenten Appeal was £156.

Sanctuary Rotas for Servers and Administrators

– Volunteers Needed

Andrew Wedge is now to move on in his life away from Dunfermline (we all wish him well in his future career) and this brings home that we are now well short of servers to help out at our communion services, particularly at the 11am service. We are down to four active servers at the moment and need another three or four to give a reasonable rotation.

If you feel that you might like to help with this duty or know of someone who might, then please contact Phil Smithard who will be able to provide more information about the task.

There is also potential space for anyone who might like to assist with the administration of the wine at communion. There are five currently working the rota and another two would be ideal. This role requires the approval of the Bishop.

If you feel that this duty might be one that you might wish to help with, then please speak with the Rector.

Thank-you in anticipation.

Student Placement—part 2

In last month's magazine we intimated that Sarah McMillan would be starting a two month placement at Holy Trinity as a preliminary to perhaps training for ordained ministry. Last weekend she was in church for the 11am Eucharist and met several members of the congregation. She looks forward to meeting many others and, by way of an introduction, she has written a few words about herself which are included below.

I'm delighted to be involved at Holy Trinity over the next couple of months. My home church is St Serf's, in sunny Burntisland, where I've been involved for the last three and half years, having moved across the water from Edinburgh. At St. Serf's, I've been a choir member for about three years, and on the lay ministry team for two years. I'm also on the vestry. In terms of the wider Diocese, I'm very excited to be involved with congregational development as part of Casting the Net.

Then there's the day job...I teach English as a Second Language to adults at Adam Smith College in Kirkcaldy. Most of the time it is great fun, and it's hugely satisfying to see the progress the students can make in a year, or two. As well as the teaching, we feel it's important to provide a level of support, even pastoral care, to those students who need it - they are far away from home and sometimes vulnerable.

Thank you for giving me this opportunity to contribute to the life and worship of Holy Trinity over the next couple of months.

Sarah McMillan

I am sorry we do not have a photograph of Sarah but I am sure many of you will spot her in church and take the opportunity for a chat and make her feel welcome. She will take part in our Sunday services and other pastoral work and also spend sometime with the young church and the youth fellowship.

Fighting poverty through trade

Tradecraft

Just to let you know that we are having a selection of jewellery and crafts as well as our regular groceries on 12th June. Ross, one of the newer members of our congregation, has some good Fairtrade connections and has agreed to help us. We look forward to seeing you then!

The SEC Provincial Overseas Committee.

I have been a member of the SEC POC for the past 18 months and it had occurred to members of the committee that our existence, let alone our work , is not widely known within the congregations of our Province. So this month I include an extract from the Provincial Web site entry for your information.

Jack Wardell

The work of the Overseas Committee is far-reaching both physically and spiritually. Physically because it supports church projects and people all over the world; spiritually because it enables the SEC to reach out in prayer and commitment to the needs of the wider church community, and to be challenged by it.

The Committee is accountable for the funds it holds and its principles are:

- To increase general awareness in the SEC of overseas issues
- To foster partnerships with mission projects and people overseas
- To promote the sharing of spirituality and understanding with overseas partners
- To experience and receive the wider church and express the SEC's commitment to it
- To enable, empower and respond to needs, through support and solidarity.

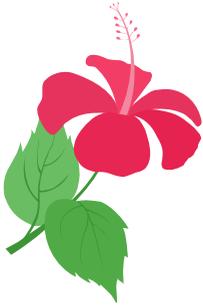

Every congregation, large or small, and every diocese, has a share in the committee's work.

Applying for Funding

The Overseas Committee welcomes applications for funding for overseas church projects. Information and application forms may be obtained from our Downloads page. See Mildred Cooch would like to send her thanks to everyone at Holy Trinity for their support, cards and condolences. She is now resident at Leys Park Care Home where she will be happy to receive visitors from time to time. She has already been to one Thursday morning Eucharist and hopes to come along more regularly now she is back in Dunfermline.

Flowers and Brasses Rota

You may have noticed that the rota for the Flowers and brasses is no longer displayed on the noticeboard. Unfortunately this does not mean that the work has gone away but simply that the work gets done by fewer and fewer people. If you can help by cleaning the brasses or preparing the altar flowers please contact Gill Wardell and she will see if we can get a Rota back on track.
